Mayor's [illegible]

Milwaukee, Dec 28, 1892.

Whereas [illegible] of many [illegible] cent conflagration [illegible] cendiary origin [illegible] will be paid [illegible] any person who will furnish evidence [illegible] incendiarism in the city of Milwaukee [illegible] past thirty days. Should any [illegible] occur during the [illegible] sixty days [illegible] reward will be paid to the person who will furnish evidence that will [illegible] guilty party. PETER J. SOMERS, Mayor.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, MILWAUKEE, Dec 28.

The undersigned [illegible] for the good order of the city have concluded and [illegible] instructed to employ for and in behalf of the city of Milwaukee 100 special policemen to serve for the term of two weeks.

PETER J. SOMERS, Mayor.
JOHN T. JANSSEN, Chief of Police.

At an informal meeting of the chamber of commerce at noon to-day a resolution was adopted calling a mass meeting at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning. A committee was also appointed to draft resolutions for presentation to the meeting.

THE POLICE OPINION.

The police seem to think that the fire at the street car barn originated either from an overheated stove or spontaneous combustion. The latter theory is based on the supposition that the fire started on the second floor and this is borne out by the testimony of some of the attendants who first saw the fire in that part of the building. The room it is said may have got so hot from the steam that the floors full of oil as they were, caught fire. Against this however, is the statement of the foreman that the fire started on the second floor and Chief Foley's belief that this was the point where the fire began. A conference was held in the private office of Chief Jansen this afternoon in which the chief, Mayor Somers, Chief Foley, District-attorney Bowen, Dewitt Stevens, superintendent of surveys of the board of underwriters, and L. A. Wheeler representing the insurance men participated. The situation was thoroughly discussed and the result was the offer of $[illegible] reward. Nearly all those present, except Chief Janssen went into the conference more or less firmly impressed with the belief that the fires were of incendiary origin. Before the conference was over some of them changed their views very materially. This was due to reports received during the progress of the conference from detectives who had been detailed to take up the origin of the different blazes. Detective McManus' report on the car barn blaze had a great deal to do with the change of mind.

District attorney Brown said at the end of the conference:

"The insurance men allege incendiarism, but when they are called here they cannot produce a particle of evidence which points to any crime. What is the use of calling a grand jury when there is no [illegible] to [illegible] before it after it is called? There have been so many fires lately that people naturally conclude that the fires are of incendiary origin." Mr Brown said further that when the insurance men were asked to give a plausible reason for their belief that the fires were caused by incendiarism that they were unable to do so. Mayor Somers said that only in two fires within the six months was there any evidence of incendiarism. But in order to quiet the public mind, which has been strained to a high nervous tension, the mayor deemed it wise to offer the reward announced above.

It has been asserted that on account of the recent fires, the foreign insurance companies would withdraw from Milwaukee. Up to date there has been only one authenticated case. That is a company represented by W[illegible] & Myers, the name not being given. This company notified its agents to write no more policies for them at present on city property. How long the bar will be kept up is not known, but insurance men say it will not be for very long. A number of com[illegible], however, began to discriminate in their risks. Some have notified their agents not to write [illegible] manufacturing or [illegible] and others have decided to take only mercantile and dwelling risks. Policies on certain [illegible] of risks are also being can[illegible]. In other words instead of reaching out after insurance, the companies are drawing in and will hereafter only take gilt edged risks unless at a good big premium.

[illegible] Reinach's Death

PARIS, Dec. 28.—The rumors concerning the death of Baron De Reinach and the theorizing in regard to it were proved this morning to have been utterly baseless. The report made by Dr Brouardel, who had charge of the autopsy was made public to-day. It declares that the analysis of the viscera revealed not the slightest trace of poison and that the conclusion arrived at by Dr Brouardel and his colleague is that the baron's death was due to natural causes.

The report, though it is official, is regarded with suspicion in certain quarters. It is claimed by some persons that the remarks by the baron on the night of his death to the effect that if the press attacks being made upon him were not stopped he was lost, indicated his intention to end his life when he found the efforts of MM. Rouvier and Clemenceau and himself to silence the newspapers were fruitless.

A Jail B[illegible]k Foiled

OTTUMWA, Ia., Dec 28.—A very clever attempt to break jail by thirty-two prisoners confined here was foiled by Susie McMillan, a domestic in the sheriff's family. It is the [illegible] for the jailer to unlock the cells and give the prisoners the freedom of the corridor and when desirous of getting out of the outer door to shake his bunch of keys in the aperture, Miss McMillan always responding to the signal. When the jailer had unlocked all the cells to-day the prisoners suddenly seized him bound and gagged and shut him up in a cell. Then one of them shook the bunch of keys to have the outer door opened. Miss McMillan responded, and although it was dark and she could not see the jailor, she with great presence of mind demanded to know if it was he. The answer did not satisfy her and she hurriedly called the sheriff, who arrived in time to frustrate consummation of the well laid plan. Many of the prisoners are arraigned for grave offenses and are an unusually tough lot. The sheriff has commanded them to all be locked in their cells till after the next term of court, which will dispose of the most of them.

A Victim of Dynamite.

DUBLIN, Dec 28.—The funeral of Detective Synott who lost his life in the explosion here [illegible] day, was held to-day and was very largely attended by officials and citizens. It was one of the largest funerals held in Dublin in many years.

A MISSING SHIP

The Cunarder Umbria Several Days Overdue

ANXIETY AS TO HER SAFETY

[illegible]

NEW YORK, Dec 28.—[illegible] Mr Brown [illegible] Mr Brown [illegible] steamers machinery [illegible] there was [illegible] has been [illegible] morning. If the ship [illegible] as to her steam [illegible] would do little more than give her headway and keep her steady so that [illegible] has come over her course [illegible] there is hardly a chance of hearing anything about her. If she is only partly disabled she would if nearer Queenstown than New York steam near the track of the eastbound steamers, in which case news of her would come first from the other side. That she was disabled while nearer the other side than to this and is now being towed eastward.

The Atlantic Transport company's twin screw steamer Manitoba arrived to-day, over the Umbria's course. During the four days the Umbria has been due the Manitoba sailed over about 1300 miles of her course, and the fact that she did not see her is some evidence but of course not positive proof that the Umbria was disabled before she had come within that distance of this port.

The Cunarder Catalonia arrived in Boston to-day, having sailed from Liverpool two days ahead of the Umbria. As the Umbria sails nearly twice as fast as the Catalonia she should have passed her on the 20th, and as the Catalonia saw nothing of her it is additional evidence in favor of the theory that the Umbria was disabled so near the other side as to induce her to return.

There is another cause possible for the delay which was discussed to-day, the possibility that she is towing some other disabled ship. This she would do only for the purpose of saving life. If she met a ship disabled, but in no danger of loss her mail contract would forbid her delaying her own passage by towing but if life was endangered she could, of course, render any assistance at any expense of time.

From the opening to the closing of the Cunard office in Bowling Green to-day there were many callers, friends of passengers on the Umbria. Some of them waited anxiously for hours after making the usual inquiries "If she had been reported." The office telephone required the constant attendance of a clerk to answer the same inquiry, which came from all parts of the city. There was something hopeless in the situation as many of the callers viewed it. The fact that not only was there no news but no way of getting it, had a depressing effect upon them.

Many inquired if the company had sent out a relief expedition, and were disappointed when they learned that this had not been done. "We must first know whether she is 200 or 300 miles away before we can send out relief" said Mr Brown, "of course if the first news of her comes from a ship that spoke her and did not or could not tow her, we could have enough information to warrant us in sending out relief with a reasonable hope of finding her. It would be useless to send out a search expedition without any information whatever to go upon."

The Umbria is now longer overdue than she has ever been before. Her longest trip was in January, 1890, when she was only three days overdue. It was recalled to-day that the Batavia of the Cunard line left here Jan 19, 1881, and was not heard of until she was towed into Fayal, in the Azores, on Feb 4, seventeen days out. She had broken her shaft and drifted south as the Umbria may now be doing. These long trips, which ended safely, were discussed with satisfaction by the callers at the office.

The Runic, of the White Star line, is looked for with as much interest, as she left Liverpool one day before the Umbria sailed from Queenstown. She is a slower ship and is only two days overdue, which, in the weather which has prevailed, is no cause for anxiety. Although the course of the Runic is some higher than the Cunard ships she may have been blown to the south by the gales, in which case she would have been in about the Umbria's longitude the day latter sailed. If this has happened, it is possible that the Runic is towing the Umbria eastward or that she spoke her and can give some information when she arrives.

Among the Umbria's passengers whose friends have inquired at the company's office is J Henry Harper of the publishing firm.

The Umbria has twice broken the six days record on westward trips. In August of this year she arrived five days twenty-two hours and seven minutes and in September five days, twenty-three hours and eighteen minutes. Her [illegible] eastwards were in November 1890, six days three hours four minutes, and in August this year, six days, one hour, fifteen minutes. She was built on the Clyde in 1884, is 520 feet long, 57 3 feet broad and 41 feet deep. Since she was built she has added twelve large saloon parlors amidships on the upper promenade decks.

Books For the Newberry Library.

CINCINNATI Dec 28.—The Newberry library of Chicago has purchased Robert Clark's collection of books on fish. This was one of the finest branches of Mr Clark's magnificent collection of Glendale and lovers of Cincinnati's welfare had hoped to secure it for the public library. It remained for Librarian Poole of the Newberry library, who was formerly a Cincinnati man to find Mr Clark's price. It is rumored that other fine collections on various subjects, including unequaled Americana will follow.

Geological Society of America.

OTTAWA, Dec. 28.—The first session of the annual meeting of the Geological Society of America opened this morning in the railway committee room of the house of commons. Governor-general Lord Stanley delivered the address of welcome. Papers by fellows of the society in both the United States and Canada were read.

The officers elected include the following: President, Sir J William Dawson, Montreal; vice-president, C. C. Chamberlain, Chicago; second vice-president, Professor Stevens of New York; secretary, H. L. Fairchild, Rochester, N. Y.; treasurer, J. C. White, Morgantown, W. Va.

This evening a public lecture will be given by Prof W J McGee of Washington, on a [illegible] earthquake. [illegible] will be given by Dr [illegible], C. M. C., Dr. [illegible] of the Canadian Geological survey, [illegible] the [illegible] with that of the Logan club. Lord Stanley, Sir John Thompson and a number of prominent citizens will be present. ## A TERRIBLE EXPLOSION

Several Persons Injured by Dynamite in Long Island

LONG ISLAND CITY, Dec 28.—[illegible]

The yards of the New York and Long Island railroad company of which William Steinway is president are bounded by Jackson avenue and Vernon avenue. Tons of brick and frame [illegible] stores line both thoroughfares. The explosion was directly in the rear. The company is building a tunnel between this city and the New York Central depot. A great deal of dynamite is being used in blasting. Last night the dynamite froze. This morning the workmen needed some and placed some of the explosive in a position to be thawed. The fire burned nearer to the dynamite than was intended and the result was the terrible and disastrous explosion. The buildings adjoining the tunnel caught fire and the fire department was soon on the scene. So soon did the fire break out after the explosion that it is not certain if the residents of the adjoining tenement escaped or were burned in their residence. Residents of the neighborhood say that the shock that followed the explosion was like an earthquake. The postoffice was in No 27. The mails are buried beneath tons of ruins, and they are certain to be ruined by water if not consumed by the flames. When the explosion occurred the letter cases were knocked into strips and the clerks were hurled headlong in the debris. A wave of flame seemed to sweep through the lower part and to demolish things immediately after the crash.

LATER—Three of the victims died at St. John's hospital this afternoon. They are: John Hopkins, Joe Delaney and Barber Rock, whose wife was also killed. Mrs. Greary is still alive but her death is expected every moment. It is now learned that McIntyre who was in charge of the dynamite when it exploded was not killed. He was found at his home where he was taken after the explosion [illegible]. He was placed under arrest charged with criminal negligence. Shortly after noon the firemen succeeded in getting the flames under control in the Dutch Flats.

The number killed by the explosion now foots up to a total of five, but it is probable that other deaths will swell the list before the day is over. McIntire was foreman of the Tunnel Construction company. He was badly injured and is in a dying condition. To a reporter he gave a brief account of the explosion. He said he had placed about forty one-pound cartridges in the box four feet square, through which steam pipes run for the purpose of thawing them out. He says he cannot account for the explosion. It is reported that an Italian who slept in a shanty within a hundred feet of where the explosion occurred, was blown to pieces.

New York Stock Market

NEW YORK Dec 28.—Money loaned at easy rates to-day. The ruling rates were 3 to 6 per cent. The lowest rate was 3 and the highest 6 per cent.

There was decidedly more trading on the stock exchange this morning, nearly double the amount of stock sold in the two hours to noon yesterday, having been disposed of during this morning's hours. The principal trading was in Manhattan, New England, Whisky Trust, Northwest, Pacific preferred, Tennessee Coal and Iron and New York and Northern. The opening prices were generally above the closing of last evening but during the first hour some irregularity was developed. Manhattan sold down 1 per cent. on realizations. It subsequently recovered partly. About the bottom figures of the morning were current in most cases at noon.

The stock market continued moderately active after 12 o'clock, but with a stronger tone. For the greater part it had the appearance of a traders' market and the movement of prices reflected little outside of their experiments.

This afternoon a small trader who had been caught on the long side of several securities which have recently suffered sharp declines, sent word to houses having contracts with him to close out his stock quietly as he was unable to carry them, but expected to pull through without suspending.

The afternoon market was principally regulated by the somewhat improved sterling outlook. Posted rates were reduced ½ cent after noon. Rumors were circulated on the exchange that $5,000,000 gold would be shipped on Saturday. The rumors were easily traced to bear traders, and were denied by foreign houses prominent in the gold movement which united in saying that it is practically certain no gold will be shipped to Europe this week. The closing prices for stocks were generally ¼ to 2½ per cent higher.

The sales for the day amounted to 303,445 shares.

The Prince Albert in Litigation.

Special to THE GAZETTE.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Colo., Dec. 28.—An injunction was served on the parties who are working the Prince Albert lode, this afternoon, by Hayes and Pritchard, who claim to have a prior right on the location. If reports of the smelter returns for first shipment from the property are to be relied on, the Prince Albert is hardly worth fighting over. However, the vein is said to be four feet wide, and as depth is attained high grade ore may be found.

Mr Cleveland's Cabinet Continually Discussed

THE NEW YORK SENATORSHIP

A [illegible] Fight Predicted The Relations Between Cleveland and Hill [illegible] Greatly Strained Cleveland's Advantage

WASHINGTON, Dec 28.—The Star [illegible] says [illegible] that Mr Murphy [illegible] and to-day believe that M[illegible] [illegible] in fact.

At present Mr Cleveland has no personal [illegible] to act as the leader [illegible] New York [illegible] would not [illegible] recently [illegible]

Mr Cleveland will however have a strong person [illegible] in the senate [illegible] fifty third congress congress will be organized [illegible] present plans [illegible] This will be Mr Bayard of Delaware in all probability.

It is expected that Senator Gray will go into the cabinet though he is at present disinclined [illegible]. His retirement from the senate will mean the election of Mr Bayard. It is reported to-day that the question of Mr Dickinson going into the cabinet has been settled and he will be secretary of state. The slate thus far made up is said to be Dickinson secretary of state, Carlisle secretary of the treasury, Gray of Delaware attorney general, Lamont secretary of the navy and Morrison secretary of the interior.

Mr Cleveland's interview in which he declares against the election of Murphy to the United States senate from New York is construed in Washington to mean that either Mr Whitney or Bourke Cockran is likely to be the next senator as a compromise. Either this will happen or there will be a tremendous row between the Hill faction and the administration.

The Hill men in Washington claim that Murphy cannot be defeated in the senatorial contest and that Mr Cleveland knows Murphy will be elected. They explain his willingness to come out in an alleged interview in opposition to Murphy in two ways. First, that he has hopes the Hill men would withdraw Murphy and settle on Mr Whitney as a compromise. Second, in the event of Murphy's election Cleveland wants to be in position to say that he had openly expressed his disapproval that he had very plainly indicated that Murphy would be distasteful to him and hence the patronage of the state of New York shall not be disposed through senatorial hands.

The great significance of Mr Cleveland's declaration, as viewed by New York [illegible] generally is that there is to be war between the administration and the Hill machine. In other words the scheme to send a Hillite like Murphy to sit in the senate to be the active partner in the firm of office dealers which Mr. Hill remains the silent [illegible] does not seem to [illegible] the approval of the president elect. Unless Hill [illegible] in the election of one of his henchmen to the senate to act as his [illegible] at the White House and attend to matters of appointments desired by members of the Hill machine throughout the state, Hill's position [illegible] will be a most uncomfortable one. He is making it a personal matter with [illegible] friends [illegible] Murphy must be elected, and in the result of Murphy's defeat and the [illegible] of a compromise candidate who is not in direct line with Hill, the latter will [illegible].

Hill and Cleveland did not meet during the campaign, because Hill was unwilling. Mr Cleveland more than once expressed a willingness to go half way in arranging peace. Hill was resolute and almost insolent in his sullenness. A favorite scheme of the campaign managers in the autumn, was to bring Cleveland and Hill together upon some platform, one to preside over the meeting and the other to speak. They abandoned this through fear that Hill would break the engagement, or, keeping it, contrive in some manner publicly to insult Mr Cleveland. The friends of Cleveland claim that Hill's conduct through the campaign was reprehensible. He made some speeches in order to save his own standing with the party, but it was not till late in the canvass until he had become convinced Cleveland would win by a large majority, that he warmed up and made speeches calculated to help the ticket.

On the other hand, Hill's friends claim Cleveland was elected through the loyalty and support of the Hill organization and that Mr Cleveland, having promised at the famous Victoria hotel dinner to treat all Democratic organizations in New York impartially — and fairly irrespective of what they may have done in the past, has no right to interfere now and endeavor to thwart the will of the Democratic state committee.

Some of the Cleveland Democrats from New York express the opinion that the state machine, over which Hill has so long exercised control, will revolt if Hill attempts to lead it into a war on the administration which will throw it out into the cold world and give all the offices to the other fellows. Senator Hill's hold upon the Democratic organization in New York has materially weakened since the Chicago convention. Many of his best friends and most devoted followers were disgusted with his sullenness after the nomination and during the campaign.

An interesting piece of gossip bearing on the Cleveland interview was current here to-day. It was that Bourke Cockran is more ambitious than is good for the peace of mind of Mr Croker. There are indications that Cockran would like to oust Croker as grand sachem. It happens that W. C. Whitney has more influence with Mr Cleveland than anyone else, and that Mr Whitney and Mr Croker are chums. Bourke Cockran is ambitious and it is said he is likely to be taken up as the Tammany and anti Murphy candidate for senator, with Mr Cleveland's approval and support.

New York members of congress, Mr Cockran included, decline to be interviewed concerning Mr Cleveland's declarations, but it is the belief of a majority of them that Mr Cleveland has determined to destroy David B. Hill's political influence in the state of New York, and that inasmuch as he now holds the whip hand in possession of the federal power, he is inclined to force rather than shrink from the struggle.

A Fatal Duel.

LONDON, Dec. 28.—The newspaper which contained the story of a duel at Monte Carlo between an American and a Russian known as the Count Peter Romanoff was the Vienna Tageblatt and not the Berlin Tageblatt, as first reported. A dispatch to-day says that the American engaged in the duel was named Jay Brockton, and he was not from Brooklyn as before stated, the suggestion that he was from Brooklyn having undoubtedly been caused by a mistake in his name. The American and Romanoff quarrelled at the gambling tables as before stated, Romanoff being the [illegible]. The American sharply resented an insulting remark on the part of the count and an immediate challenge [illegible] the result. The two men fought in the grounds of a private villa and evidently meant a duel to the death. The conditions were twenty-five paces, with liberty to advance to within two paces of each other and to keep on firing until one or the other should fall. Both American and Russian came to the mark and on the word being given they fired with deadly intent, at [illegible] time [illegible]. The [illegible] struck Romanoff just above the heart. The count reeled and fell and in a few minutes expired. Considerable mystery exists as to the identity of Count Peter Romanoff his real or assumed name having suggested some connection with the imperial family of Russia. A New York paper suggests that Count Peter Romanoff may or may not be the traveling incognito of the Grand Duke Peter Nicolaievitch who is the second son of the late Grand Duke Nicolai Nicolaievitch who was the [illegible]. The Grand Duke Peter was born in St. Petersburg in 1864, is [illegible] of the emperor, captain of the Lancers regiment of the imperial guard and married in 1889 at Peterhoff the Princess Militza, the [illegible] daughter of the Prince of Montenegro.

An Objectionable Advertisement

CHICAGO, Dec 28.—Chicago is in a sensational stew over the appearance of the picture of Mrs Potter Palmer on a brewery calendar for 1893. Considered from a lithographic point of view the calendar [illegible] is [illegible] work of art. But in the center [illegible] surrounded by sprigs of grain and natural colors and surmounted by a view of the Woman's building at the World's Fair is the president of the board of lady managers and one of the leading stars in Chicago's social circles. The portrait was used without Mrs Palmer's consent and without her knowledge. Mr Palmer who was made aware of the startling freedom with which the Brewery company used his wife's picture, was a very angry man to-day. "I never gave permission to have the picture used and I am sure my wife did not" said Mr Palmer. "I'll enjoin every party in the transaction if they do not put a stop to the issuance of those calendars.

"But the lithographers who printed the calendars for the brewery say that they have used the pictures of the president, vice-president, Mrs Cleveland and others and that they do not think you can do anything about the use of Mrs Palmer's picture.

"Can't I? We will see about that. I shall consult my lawyers at once."

Mr Potter Palmer was much surprised to-day when shown the picture of herself on the calendar. She replied most emphatically:

"I never gave my consent to have my picture used. Well this is charming I must say. And to think that a brewery should use my picture on its 'ad.' I have refused to give my name, picture or autograph to young women making collections, and I would be the last to afford a brewery an opportunity to take such an unwarrantable liberty with my picture."

The president of the brewing company that issued the calendar says that in the old country pictures of the royalty are to be found on the packages of beer. "They thought nothing of it as long as the article is good. 'We certainly make a good brand of beer,' said he, 'and there should be no objection. A young man representing the lithographing firm of Kurz & Allison solicited our order for some of those calendars and described one on which would appear Mrs. Palmer's picture and a cut of the women's building. I asked him if he had her picture, and he took from his pocket a photograph of Mrs. Palmer and remarked that Mr Kurz was an old schoolmate of Mr Palmer's and he had obtained permission to use her picture. The wonder struck me as being unique and attractive and I ordered several thousand of them, many of which have been distributed to our customers."

A Victim of Unkind Fortune.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 28.—His old friends to-day buried Joe Beekman. He died poor, but twenty-two years ago he was one of the noted wheat operators of Portland, Ore., and made as much as $750,000 in a single speculation. Suddenly about five [illegible] his wife applied for divorce for infidelity and secured it. On the day it was granted [illegible] and his brother were ruined by a [illegible] plunge in wheat and they both fled from Portland, leaving debts of a half million, with no assets. The brother went [illegible] while Joe came here in disguise and secured a place as night clerk in a hotel. He lived this secluded life, saving every cent of his small salary to pay dues on his life insurance policies, which were made payable to his wife and children. His wife is now living in New York and Beekman last words were of love for her.

A Flood Feared.

SACRAMENTO, Cal Dec. 28.—Fears are entertained of a flood along the Sacramento river, as the stream has reached a height of 27½ feet, nearly one foot higher than ever before. The raising of the levee at Sacramento saves the state capitol from a bad flood. At several points above Sacramento the water is reported as pouring over the embankment, but no break has yet occurred. The river is steadily rising, however, and a break is almost sure to come.

The valley above Sacramento for thirty miles each way is as flat as a barn floor and in many places is below the river level. There has been no [illegible] flood for twelve years. In 1880 the whole valley was converted into an inland [illegible]. One levee broke just below Sacramento and much damage was done.

A Rumored Battle

NEW ORLEANS, Dec 28. The Times-Democrat's Nuevo Laredo, Mex., [illegible] says: This has been a day of anxiety in military circles here, as there was every reason for believing that the revolutionists would make an attack on Guerrero, where a large quantity of arms and ammunition were stored. It is very hard to obtain any information, but it is certain that the expected attack has not yet been made.

There have been rumors here of an engagement however, about twenty miles south of San Miguel, between 150 revolutionists and a detachment of eighty Mexican soldiers, in which five soldiers were wounded.

Senator Stewart's Opinion.

NEW YORK, Dec. 28. Senator Stewart of Nevada is in town. "The monetary conference," he said, "is a failure. It won't amount to anything. If the Republicans do not hurry up and pass a free coinage bill this winter they will not carry a state west of the Rocky mountains in 1896. If the Democrats do not pass a free coinage bill when they come into power the Populists will elect a president in 1896." Senator Stewart said he thought the Populists had come to stay. Free coinage would be one of their principal planks.

A Bill for National Quarantine.

WASHINGTON, Dec 28.—The sub-committee having charge of the subject of establishing a national quarantine, have agreed upon a bill which they will report to the full committee at its next regular meeting after the recess on Friday week. The bill agreed upon is a combination of Senator Harris' senate bill and of that [illegible] introduced in the house by Mr. Raynor. It puts the national quarantine system into the hands of the hospital service of the revenue marine.

Coal Miners Crushed.

DENVER, Dec. 28. Geo. McIver and Matthew Ransom two miners employed in the Acme mine near Louisville were crushed to death early this morning. They were engaged in running loaded cars upon the cage, when the engineer started to hoist it before the signal was given the men were caught under the roof of the drift and instantly killed.

A Bank Robber Released

BOSTON, Dec. 28. James Dunlap famous as one of the Northampton bank robbers, who has rounded out [illegible] in the state's prison out of a 20-year sentence, will step forth to-morrow a free man, Governor Russell having signed an unconditional pardon. For eleven years efforts have been made to secure his release.

In Colorado Springs has during the past two years not increased much in price, but has all the time been steadily increasing in value. This is the natural result of an increase in population. Just as soon as our improving values are understood an increase in prices will inevitably follow. Why not anticipate the coming conditions and buy now while prices are under actual values? It would be common sense business to do so. I offer some bargains.

THE NEW YEAR'S GAZETTE.

The New Year's GAZETTE will be issued as the regular Sunday morning paper, and will contain many features of especial interest. The usual descriptive articles have been rewritten for this number and will be found complete and accurate in description of the city as it is to-day. Special attention is given to improvements completed during the year, and to events of consequence which have happened in the same period.

The special articles include one upon the Cripple Creek mines, detailing the amount of development work, and the condition and prospects of a large number of the principal mines of the camp. This article is the work of Mr. Edward Skewes, the well-known expert. Professor Frank H. Loud has contributed an article on Colorado College and its history for the past year, which has not been uneventful. Mr. G. B. Turnbull, the efficient principal of the High school, is better qualified to write on this subject than anyone else, and has furnished an article on the new building and the school which is timely and interesting.

A large number of new cuts have been secured especially for this number, including, among others, pictures of the new El Paso Bank building, the Unitarian church, the proposed Methodist Episcopal church, South, the proposed new hotel adapted for invalids, and a number of new residences. There will be also new pictures of the Printers' Home, the El Paso club and the new High School building, made from recent photographs especially for this number.

These features are sufficient to warrant the statement that the New Year's GAZETTE will not be inferior to any yet issued, but there is in addition a large and handsome map of the Cripple Creek mining district showing all the country from the county line north to Rhyolite [illegible] and from Beaver creek to Mt. Pisgah. It shows all the streams and [illegible], the townsites of Cripple Creek, Fremont, [illegible], Lawrence and [illegible] City, and the location of [illegible], [illegible] City, and Hull's camp, the [illegible] of the Midland Terminal railroad, and the situation of most of the principal mines of the camp. The map is large enough and free enough from confusing details so that any claim owner or anyone interested in the camp can determine the location of his own property and mark it upon the map.

The edition is large but limited. Many orders have already been received, and all persons wishing copies should notify the business office of THE GAZETTE at once.

THE STATE FARMERS' ALLIANCE.

The Colorado Farmers' Alliance and Industrial Union, now in session in Denver, can make its meetings of great value to the farmers of the State if it chooses. In order to do so, all that is necessary is for the delegates to remember that the Farmers' Alliance, as such, is a non-political body, not to be confounded with the People's Party, which is an entirely separate organization.

There are many things the farmers can do for themselves that nobody else can do for them. They can discuss better methods of raising crops and of getting them to market. They can make their local exchanges valuable and profitable to themselves and the community. They can, by united action, secure better prices for their necessary implements and supplies, as well as for their products. In short, by attending strictly to the business side of their organization, they can do a great deal for their own benefit and the benefit of their customers.

There is always a tendency, in meetings of this kind, to branch out into the discussion of national politics, and to expend a great deal of oratory on matters with which the Farmers' Alliance, as an organization, has, properly, nothing whatever to do. The expenditure of this "mere sound and fury, signifying nothing," is very attractive to the orator himself, and is often greeted with applause by his audience; but the real work of the Farmers' Alliance, if it is to do any real work at all, lies in a different field. We trust that body now in session in Denver will realize this fact, and govern its deliberations accordingly.

THE NEEDS OF THE WEST.

One of the most trenchant and suggestive articles yet published concerning the great west, its advantages and disadvantages, its prospects and its needs, is that in the January Forum by Mr. Charles S. Gleed, formerly editor-in-chief of the Denver Tribune, but now, we believe, a resident of Kansas. Mr. Gleed's survey is broad, and his grasp of the subject is firm; and whether the reader agrees with all his conclusions or not, the article itself must be interesting and suggestive to all western men.

All of us know the advantages of the west—the almost boundless area, the fine climate, the fertile soil, the mineral wealth, the constantly increasing resources. Hitherto, however, there have been many disadvantages. The capital to develop the west has come from the east, and its earnings have largely gone back to the east. Debts have been contracted freely, sometimes recklessly. Western supplies of all sorts have come from the east. Western railroads and western express and insurance companies have been mainly operated from [illegible]. The public necessities of the [illegible] the outlay of enor[illegible] for public improvements—money which had to be borrowed in the east. The west has suffered also from the appreciation in the value of gold. Such, in brief, is Mr. Gleed's summary of the causes that have put the west at a disadvantage.

Now for the remedy. First, debts contracted must be paid, so as to keep credit good; and further debts must be contracted only in the most conservative manner, and for the surest purpose. Public franchises should not be given away, but managed wisely as a source of profit. Manufacturing should be done at home. The west has sent too much of its raw material east, only to buy it back again, after being made up into manufactured goods, by the export of more raw material. Another matter of great importance is to make legislation more conservative. We quote Mr. Gleed's exact words:

> The west should keep her statute books clear of all crude, extravagant and extraordinary laws, which accomplish nothing but the purposes of the demagogues and cranks who devise them; except to drive rich men to the seclusion of great cities and the immunity of non-residence. Nagging laws and gad-fly officials make a combination which draws poverty like a plaster. * * This must not be construed as a reflection on stringent liquor laws, or any other laws directly stimulating the virtues of the people; for no intelligent man can forget that vice occasions every nation many times more loss in any given time than all other causes combined.

Thus far, Mr. Gleed writes mainly for the west; but the conclusion of his article is a solemn admonition to the east, and a warning that if there is to be any separation of interests—as there ought not to be—then the west can get along without the east better than the east can get along without the west.

We do not share Mr. Gleed's fear that that there will be any separation of interests. Every year east and west are getting closer together, coming to a better mutual understanding. Every year the thoughts of men, both east and west, "are widened with the process of the suns." But there is in the article much food for reflection, for Americans both east and west, and much sound advice.

MR. CLEVELAND'S "PERSONAL COMFORT."

Once upon a time, while Mr. Cleveland was Governor of New York, he sent word down from Albany that it would conduce greatly to his personal comfort if Mr. Thomas F. Grady—who then enjoyed the title, since transferred to Mr. Bourke Cockran, of Tammany's silver-tongued orator—would be kept at home from the State senate during the next ensuing term. He has now, it appears, made a somewhat similar request in regard to Mr. Edward Murphy and the United States Senatorship.

If the Democratic majority in the New York legislature heed this request of Mr. Cleveland, it will be a great personal triumph for him; for as things stand Mr. Murphy is "slated" for the senatorship, and seems to have the votes pledged to elect him. There is one consideration that may induce Tammany to obey Mr. Cleveland's mandate. If Mr. Murphy is elected, in spite of his protest, the president elect will have a good excuse for declaring off whatever ante election bargain he may have made with Mr. Croker about the distribution of federal patronage in New York. On the other hand, it seems probable now that Mr. Cleveland will do that in any event, and Tammany may conclude to send Mr. Murphy to the senate just to show the president-elect that it undoubtedly controls the State of New York. In either event a split in the New York Democracy is altogether probable.

The decision of the Supreme Court of Wyoming in the Carbon county case gives the Democrats two more members of the lower house of the legislature, and will probably enable them to organize that body. The indications now point to the election of a Democrat or a Populist as United States Senator from that State. The Montana case is not yet settled, but the Populist members of the legislature seem likely to hold the balance of power.

The convicted ballot-box stuffers in the New Jersey State prison have all been released on parole by the State board of pardons. Of course, Governor Abbett favored their release. He was the original beneficiary of the frauds they committed, and it would be the height of ingratitude for him to refuse to do all in his power to shield them from the consequences of their crime.

It is certainly to be hoped that Mr. Potter Palmer, of Chicago, may find some legal means of redress against the brewing company that has printed Mrs. Palmer's picture on its calendar. The calendar ought to be suppressed, and the company made to pay heavy damages for such an outrageous violation of the proprieties.

Our news to-day shows that we prophesied truly in saying, at the beginning of the late Rock Island strike, that the company would be much more disposed to listen to any representations made by its operators if they remained at work than if they went out on a strike.

Mr. John D. Rockefeller has made a Christmas present of another million of dollars to Chicago University. This is not the first institution that has found it a good thing to have a Rockefeller for a patron.

Wait and See.

John Kendrick Bangs, in Harper's Young People.

It's a great thing, Jimmieboy, when you don't know what to do and can't find any one to tell you, to sit down and do nothing, because if you did something you'd be likely to find out afterwards that it was the wrong thing. When I was young, in the days when I was what I used to be, I once read a poem that has lingered with me ever since. It was called "Wait and See," and thus is the way it went:

'When you are puzzled what to do,
  And no one's nigh to help you out,
You'll find it for the best that you
Should wait until Time gives the clew,
  And then your business go about
    Of this there is no doubt.

'Just see the cow! She never knows
  What's going to happen next, so she
Contented 'mongst the daisies goes
In clover from her head to toes,
  From care and trouble ever free;
    She simply waits, you see.

'The horse, unlike the cow, in fear
  Jumps to and fro at maddest rate,
Tears down the street, doth snort and rear
And knocks the wagon out of gear—
  And just because he does not wait
    His woes accumulate.

'D. Crockett, famous in the past,
  The same sage thought hath briefly wed
To words that must forever last
Wherever haply they be cast:
  "Be sure you're right, then go ahead."
    That's what D. Crockett said.'

A Word to Office Seekers.

From Harper's Weekly.

To all young men who contemplate a journey to Washington for the purpose of securing employment, the best advice is, don't. The humblest situation in a mercantile house where the pecuniary reward is small, where the hours are long, and where the labor is hard, is better in the end than a government clerkship. One way lie opportunities for advancement, for the utilization and final reward of every talent and all the energy that the young man possesses. The other way lie hopelessness, drudgery, stagnation.

Many a poor man seeks a government clerkship in order that he may earn his support while he is studying his profession. He is playing with fire. He is taking up as a staff that which is likely to become necessary to him as a crutch. He is in danger of discovering, when his profession is learned, that he has not the moral courage to drop his government stipend. It would have been infinitely better—it might have been his making—if he had toiled for scantier dollars in a manlier way.

The government clerk drags out a monotonous existence, dreary, unpromising of advancement, and if he is not turned out in his old age, to linger on through his few remaining years in poverty, he is one of the most fortunate of his kind.

There is no services that so destroys the latent energies and kills the hope as that of a government clerk. Young men who think they have the elements of success in them should avoid it as they would the plague.

A New Delivery Scheme.

New York Press.

Major J. B. Harlow, postmaster of St. Louis, submitted two years ago to the Post Office department at Washington a plan for utilizing street cars in the delivery of mail. The first trial of this scheme was made a few days ago in St. Louis on one of the electric cars in operation in that city.

The mail car is twenty-eight feet long, and is fitted up much as the regular railroad mail cars are arranged. Stations were established along the route at which postmen were waiting with the mail they had collected in each district. This was sorted on the car and distributed along the route at such points as the addresses called for, each postman being given a bundle of mail for delivery as soon as he delivered the bundle he had collected. In several instances letters collected at one stop were postmarked ready for delivery at the next.

A postal card mailed at Seventeenth and Wash streets was collected by the carrier at 9:30 o'clock, reached the car at 9:55, was turned over to the carrier for delivery at Twenty-first and Wash streets at 9:58, and reached the person to whom it was addressed not later than 10:30. Under the old system that postal card would have been sent to the main office and not sent out for delivery before 2:30 in the afternoon. This was a gain of four hours time in delivery.

A National Quarantine Is a National Necessity.

New York Herald.

The Chamber of Commerce yesterday voiced the sentiment of commercial New York for a national quarantine and against a Tammany quarantine.

Now let similar representative trade bodies throughout the United States follow this timely lead and demand of Congress immediate legislation for the protection of the public health and the business interests of the nation.

A national quarantine is a national necessity.

The outbreak of an epidemic in any foreign country is a menace to the entire United States. To guard against its invasion it is not enough to quarantine at New York alone. There must be a quarantine at every port of entry from Portland, Me., to Portland, Ore. There must be a barrier following the Canadian boundary from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

A state system is but a local precaution. It guards only one point of entrance. If it proves ineffective the entire country is exposed to danger. Immigrants who enter at the port of New York are distributed all over the country. They go to every state, city and town. If through the inadequacy or inefficiency of the state quarantine any immigrants are passed with latent, undetected germs of cholera they become the carriers of the disease to their interior destination.

Again, with only a local barrier at this port against infected immigration, what is to prevent the tide turning to Montreal and effecting an entrance into the United States by way of Canada?

A national quarantine not only guards the country at every point, but it is capable of an efficiency not attainable under state control. It has at command at the resources of the national treasury, the army and navy, the foreign consular service in short, all the facilities of the federal government. Above all, it is beyond the reach of local political interference—beyond the grasp of the Tammany tiger.

Its establishment is a national duty.

STATE NEWS.

About 35,000 lambs are being fed and fattened this winter in the Cache la Poudre valley. Nearly all of the sheep were brought from New Mexico and the southern part of Colorado. There is alfalfa hay enough in the valley to feed and fatten three times as many more.—Fort Collins Courier.

Next year the yield will show a great increase over this.—[Alamosa Courier.

Dr. Rambo was in town last Saturday, from Moffat, and is authority for the statement that when the proposed line of railway is constructed over Mosca pass, it will head straight across country for Creede. He informed us that this statement is substantially that made by a prominent railroad contractor at Pueblo to George H. Adams. This is all O. K.. But when Tuttle and Finley gulches are heard from in the spring, with their outputs of ore, the railroads will come here without much coaxing.—[Saguache Crescent.

Rev. G. D. Olden, pastor of the Metropolitan Baptist (colored) church of Chattanooga, Tenn., was in town yesterday. The purpose of his visit to Denver is to find a suitable place in the west to bring a large part of his congregation, who wish to leave the south and find a home away from the influences and memories of the south in which to bring up their families. Mr. Olden is greatly interested in his work, and after thoroughly over all the west has decided that Denver is the most suitable place in which to establish his "colony." It may properly be called a colony, for between now and May 1 about three hundred members of Mr. Olden's congregation will make their home in Denver.—[Denver Republican.

HOW BUTCHER JOHN GREW RICH.

He Happened to Have a Black Calf Which He Played at the Right Time.

Many years ago, long before the railroads and telegraph poles and very long before the civil war, when Reading, Pa., was only a quaint country town and its one chief summer resort was the old White House hanging on the side of the Neversink hill and overlooking the blue waters of the Schuylkill river at its foot, Butcher Reifsnyder—old Butcher John—came slowly wending his own and his horse's way around the curve known as Lovers' Leap, a half mile farther down the mountain road having in his wagon a solitary black calf somewhere between 10 months and a year old. Veal was scarce and John was mad for no matter how small he cut the pieces he could not supply his customers, among them some of the first families in Reading. He was hungry, too, and what was worse he was dry. The White House door was open, and in the office at a table sat Judge Cly—r, Lawyer Ric—, Lawyer B—s and Dr. H—r.

Well, he drew rein in front of the old tavern porch. It was midnight. The landlord, who knew his guests well, had retired, leaving the house to darkness and to them. No one heard the butcher; the dust was knee deep on that much traveled country road. Reifsnyder stepped down and surveyed the four men, all of whom he well knew, and who came to this lonely spot to play cards for money, and a glittering pile lay on the table, around which these four gentlemen stood with drawn pistols, while words hot and heavy were hurled at each other across the pile of gold. It was Judge Cly—r who spoke now:

"You're a liar," he thundered at his opponent. "You cheated! I saw you do it and before you touch that money may the devil with horns and hoofs come in and tear me in as many pieces as there are dollars in that pile!"

No sooner said than done. Reifsnyder, who had lifted his calf off the wagon to give it some water, now turned to the low windows, wide open, and with a few vigorous thrusts and twists of the tail the black calf lit in their midst, bellowing as only a black calf can. One moment of supreme consternation; then, with blanched faces and calls on the Almighty, the four gamblers made for the door, leaving hats, coats, money and all behind them in their wild flight to the town.

Said old John: "I hollered fer 'em to stop; that it was all fun, but it only made them run the harder, thinking the devil was after them sure. I went in and got my calf. Then seeing the money, and knowing old Rightmeyer was in jail, I stroked it into my hat and took it along with me. Did I keep it? Well, you see I was half afeard of what I had done after the turn things took, so I went to old Judge Cly—r and tried to straighten it out like."

"So it wasn't the devil after all!" he said with a genuine sigh of relief. "No, John, keep that money for your share of the fun, but for the dear Lord's sake keep the story two."

Well, he only told a few, but somehow or other it leaked out, and now it is a story that every Reading boy and girl has heard grandpa or grandma relate, and wonder how old Butcher John came to be rich so soon has long ago ceased to be a wonder.—St. Louis Republic.

Her Advice.

"It is very kind of you, Mr. Jelly, to ask me to be your wife, but it can never be."

It was a fair young woman who spoke.

The man whose doom she had thus sealed had the appearance of a wreck.

She was the two dozenth woman who had crushed his hopes, and it began to have its effect on him.

He rose from his knees trembling.

She was sorry for him, as women are under such circumstances, but she had done the best she could.

In a few brief moments he recovered his speech.

His lips quivered, but he was bound to say something.

"What shall I do?" he moaned.

The girl shook her head.

"I've asked two dozen women to marry me," he went on, "in the last ten years, and every one has sat down on me. Even you have," he sighed, "and now what shall I do? I am completely worn out."

Her face was ablaze and her eyes snapped. Then she became cold and cruel.

"You would better have yourself upholstered and try again," she hissed between her clinched teeth.—Chicago Dispatch.

Literature of a Student.

Here is the way a student in a certain college wrote a piece of news for a local paper. "A epidemic has broke out among the students. It made its appearance on a certain evening, when 5 or 6 student took down. The doctor declered it was poision. A young calf was killed and eatten, and that is suppozed to have been the source."—Hartford Courant.

In 1597 the English had potatoes, tulip roots, radishes, pumpkins, artichokes, colewort, cabbage, cucumbers, carrots, parsnips, turnips, beets, asparagus, onions, lettuce and cress.

THE GAZETTE.

THURSDAY, DECEMBER 29, 1892.

The Santa Fe road has been rather heading the wreckord during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. John A. Sprague returned yesterday from a visit of a week in Denver.

The annual ball of the Matt France Hose company will take place in Durkee hall, Monday, Jan. 2, '93.

Mr. Charles Hull of Denver, of the medical department of the university, is visiting friends in the city.

Q. J. Wellington, of the College Book store, is making a special rate on blank books, diaries, stationery and holiday goods.

Coroner Marlow has decided that an inquest is unnecessary on the death of John Kelley, the section boss killed at Edgerton.

A number of the teachers of the city public schools went to Denver yesterday to attend the State Teachers' association meeting.

Messrs. Bassett and Sill have sold the Shimp stock of clothing, which they recently purchased, to Messrs. Holbrook & Perkins.

The Unity club held an interesting session last evening. The paper for the evening was read by Professor Krauss on "Superstition."

The New Year's attraction at the opera house, Saturday evening, will be Katie Putnam in her new play. Reserved seats now on sale at popular prices.

Mr. J. F. Seldomridge has returned from a trip to Philadelphia. His daughter, Miss Hattie, who has been visiting friends in the east returned with him.

A number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Sperry joined with them on Tuesday evening, at their home in Ivywild, in celebrating their tenth wedding anniversary.

The initiatory staff of Pike's Peak Lodge No. 38, I. O. O. F., are all requested to be present at the meeting this evening. A number of applicants will be initiated.

Prof. J. M. Dickey will lecture at the Church of the Strangers to-morrow night. His subject is "The Life that Conquers." Admission 25 cents, children under 12 years old 15 cents.

Mr. R. W. Tansill has received a number of souvenir cigar cases from his Chicago house that are intended to advertise the famous Punch cigar. They are made of aluminum and are very handsome.

There was great amusement for the children yesterday in front of F. E. Robinson's drug store. The monkey was again placed in the window after an absence of two years and proved a great attraction.

The Misses Heatherington are erecting a neat cottage on East Platte avenue near the Santa Fe track. These ladies came to the city last season and were so well pleased that they remained for permanent residence.

Rev. J. P. Lucas will conclude his pastorate at the Christian church next Sunday, preaching morning and evening. Mr. Lucas has arranged to work under the Colorado State Board of the Christian church in building up churches in small localities and in otherwise increasing the usefulness of the denomination.

Messrs. Miller Bros. of this city have sold their drug business on South Tejon street to Tamm & Accolarius, of Leadville, and the stock is now being invoiced. It is thought the stock will invoice nearly $10,000. The new firm are the owners of a wholesale drug house in Leadville. Mr. Tamm will conduct the Leadville business. Mr. Accolarius will remove with his family to this city. The Messrs. Miller will devote their time to their mining interests.

The little people had a gay time last evening at Durkee hall. Mrs. Whitbeck gave a reception to her juvenile classes, and it was a society event for the little tots. They were there in large numbers and enjoyed it to the full extent of their powers. Their fathers, mothers, and big brothers and sisters were there too. The dancing continued until 9:30 o'clock, when they were served with a nice supper. After the children had gone home the older ones danced for an hour or two.

MORE POSTOFFICE ROOM.

Additional Accommodations Made Necessary by Increasing Business.

Colorado Springs is at last to have increased postoffice facilities. A contract was signed yesterday by which Mrs. Robertson, owner of the Robertson block, leases to the government the room now occupied by the J. D. O'Haire clothing house adjoining the present postoffice building.

The business of the postoffice has increased over 10 per cent. during the past year and the various departments were greatly cramped for lack of room. The change from the old quarters on the east side of Tejon street to the corner of Huerfano was a change for the better, but there was still too little room.

The newly leased room is about the size of the present postoffice and will give ample room for the postmaster, clerks and carriers. It is probable that the money order, registry and other departments will be moved into the new room. Arched doorways will be cut in the partition, giving easy access to both rooms. The carriers and railway clerks are now confined in one small room. With the new departure they will have twice the space.

In its new quarters the postoffice will be as well housed and have as good facilities as that of any city in the west of the size of Colorado Springs.

The change will be made in a very few weeks, just as soon as Mr. O'Haire completes invoicing.

Another Handsome Residence.

Mr. R. W. Tansill, who is widely known throughout the country on account of his mammoth cigar factories in Chicago and New York, and who has made Colorado Springs his home off and on for the last four years, has definitely decided to locate here permanently. Yesterday Mr. Tansill purchased a fine lot in Audley Place, on North Cascade avenue, and it is his intention to begin in the near future the erection of a handsome residence. Mr. Tansill after trying almost every climate in the United States and Europe has decided that Colorado Springs is the proper place for him and his family. This decision has been reached largely on account of the benefit derived by his wife from her last year's residence here. Mr. Tansill is fully convinced that there is no other town that possesses so many natural and artificial advantages as Colorado Springs.

"An Unclaimed Express Package."

During the performance of Katie Putnam's new play, "An Unclaimed Express Package," at the opera house Saturday evening, a number of new songs, dances, and specialties will be introduced. Included in the company is the celebrated Columbian quartet. An exchange says: "In the third act of Miss Putnam's new play, 'An Unclaimed Express Package,' the first scene shows the village church in midwinter by moonlight, and on a distant hill can be seen a huge blast furnace in operation. The scene is said to be an excellent reproduction of the famous village church at Homestead, the scene of the late strike, with Carnegie's steel mill in the distance."

A Reported Fight on the San Juan.

DENVER, Dec. 28.—An evening paper prints a story of a fight alleged to have occurred at the new San Juan gold fields in southern Utah. It is rather indefinite but nothing further can be learned to-night. The story is as follows: There are nearly 1000 men in the new fields and there has been very little attention paid to the people staking off claims. The prospectors have simply devoted their time to prospecting and scouring the sands to find the most promising locations. There have been a few claims staked out, however, in places where many colors to the pan have been found. But the lines of the claims, it is said, were not reported and a quarrel ensued.

There were some seventeen men engaged in the conflict and about one hundred shots were fired, wounding a number of the combatants, and killing a man whose name is said to be George Ferguson. No details of the trouble have been secured. The bare information of the trouble was brought into Denver by parties from southern Colorado, who received their information by the way of Bluff City.

Colorado Farmers' Alliance.

DENVER, Dec. 28.—At this morning's session of the state Farmers' Alliance resolutions were adopted in favor of a government railroad from the gulf to the lakes, for a repeal of the military poll tax and for female suffrage. Senators and representatives in congress were asked to continue to work for the free and unlimited coinage of silver and gold at a ratio of sixteen to one, and to see that no tariff bill be allowed to pass until this is secured.

The convention expressed itself as opposed to the issuance of Nicaragua Canal bonds and favoring the enforcement of the United States senate resolution of 1798, prohibiting any officers or stockholders in any banking corporation from holding a seat in the United States congress.

The Habit of Useful Reading.

A successful woman doctor says: "I married a young physician, and living as we did in a small country town we could not afford to take the papers and magazines to which I had been accustomed in my father's home. During the long winter evenings, often left alone, I found the time dragging heavily, and never caring much for fancy work I turned as a last resort to my husband's medical books and journals. I soon became fascinated, and when my husband found that I was well prepared for a first term in a medical college he was not unwilling for me to take the course."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Arsenical Poisoning.

The danger through arsenical poisoning in our homes is not confined to the wall papers, having been found often present in cretonnes and imitation Indian muslin in poisonous quantities. A bad specimen of cretonne has yielded on analysis 19¼ grains of white arsenic, 2½ grains having been known to be a fatal dose. Some months back a London doctor experimented upon forty-four samples of cretonne supplied by a local tradesman, not one of which was absolutely free from the poison; eleven of them were grouped by the analyst as "very bad," and nine as "distinctly dangerous."

It is quite a common occurrence to have pieces of these substances in a room containing sufficient arsenic to give 100 people a fatal dose. A very popular impression has been that greens and blues are the dangerous colors, but the analyst declares that reds, browns and blacks are more dangerous still.—Chambers' Journal.

One Hour's Work.

"I'm simply exhausted," said Mrs. Higgins as she returned from her shopping tour. "Here I've been out one whole hour, and couldn't get near a counter. Why, in all that time I've only bought five yards of lace, a dozen pairs of gloves, a stepladder, six finger bowls, a toy book for Willie, a pair of shoes for Sallie and stockings for Jamie, three neckties, four collars, a novel, three cups of chocolate, a pound of candy and a few knickknacks."—Harper's Bazar.
